Is there any effect on Votes for Short Runtime ?

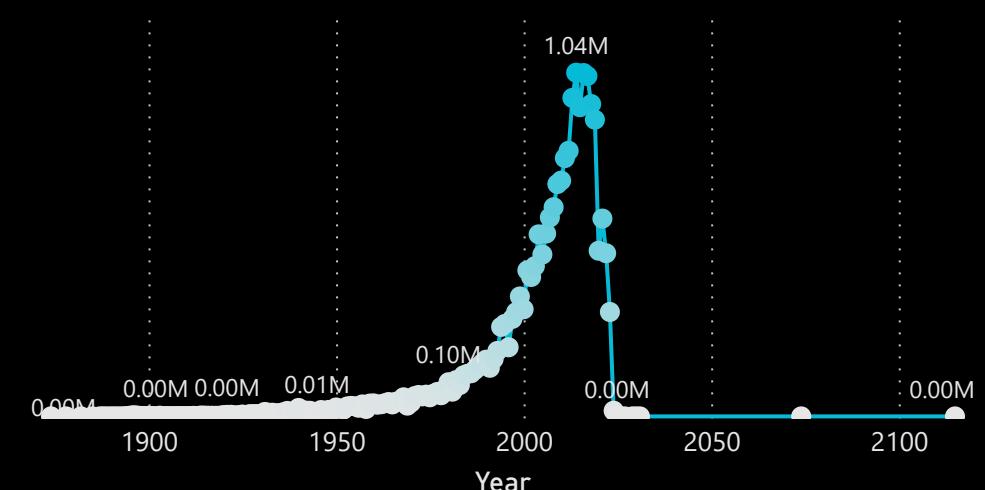

Movies with shorter runtimes tend to receive fewer votes, possibly due to less time for engagement or perceived value. This suggests viewers may prefer longer films for more immersive experiences or perceive them as having higher quality.

Peak Votes on Movies By Year

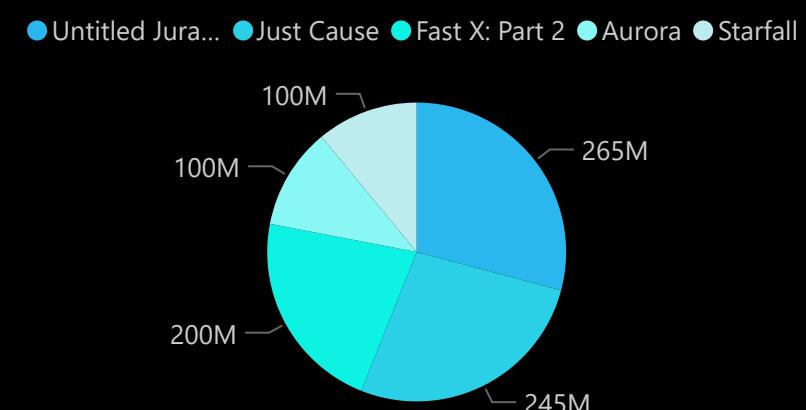

In 2016, movies experienced a surge in audience engagement, with several garnering over a million votes. This trend has steadily grown since the 1980s, indicating increasing viewer participation and interest over the years. The rise suggests evolving audience behaviors, possibly influenced by technological advancements, expanded access to films, and a growing global cinema culture.
